Key Highlights:

- In June 2019, The Estée Lauder Companies Inc. declared a new partnership with Cruelty-Free International and a prolonged partnership with Humane Society International to progress the global end to cosmetics animal testing, an area the company has been a leader in for more than three decades.
- In 2018, O Boticário, a prominent player in the vegan beauty products market increased its operations in UAE through the launch of its second retail outlet in Dubai. The official launch of this retail outlet will offer widespread scope for further growth of the company's presence in the Middle East and blow into new customer segments via its cruelty-free beauty product offerings.

Analyst View:

Growing consumer preference towards cruelty-free and plant-based products stimulated by ethical-led choices, involving personal care products. This, in turn, is possible to create countless opportunities for the manufacturers of vegan beauty products over the forecast period. Consumers are shifting their preference from chemical-based beauty products, owing to safety reasons, and are drawn towards 'natural' and 'safe' products. This, in turn, is likely to drive the adoption of vegan beauty products in the coming years. Furthermore, a growing number of social media channels and beauty bloggers are promoting makeup hacks using vegan beauty products. This, in turn, is boosting manufacturers of vegan beauty products.
